

“BEAUTIFUL MUSIC”

EXODUS 15:1-21

Music is powerful. It inscribes itself onto the hard drive of our minds and leaves a lasting impression. Its influence is profound. And when music is saturated in scripture and stirs our souls, we truly can worship God in spirit and in truth (John 4:23-24).

THE SONG OF MOSES

① The Theme A _____ (15:1)

It occurs in two parts: _____ God is and _____ God has done.

This song of Moses proclaims the _____ of God and exclaims the _____ of Egypt.

② The Theme A _____ (15:2-12; 18-21)

The right hand of the Lord is lifted up and the mighty muscle of the enemy is wiped out.

The very One who breathed into the first man the breath of _____ (Genesis 2:7) now breathes out through His own nostrils the breath of _____ on these Egyptian soldiers.

This them repeats itself again and again (15:2-5, 6-10, 11-12, 18-19). Even his _____ sings the same tune (15:21).

③ The Theme A _____ (15:13-17)

Mercy (lovingkindness, steadfast love) is the covenantal act of God to His chosen people.

Not only had the Lord brought them out of a land of oppression; He would also bring them into a land of promise. 15:13 and 15:17 mirror each other as they echo the same theology of _____.

Fear will grip the enemies of God (15:14-16) while faith will flow from the people of God. This holy dread would open doors in foreign lands for His people to walk through.

CONCLUSION

Could it be that we limit the fullness of our life in Christ? Somewhere in between the moment we first believed in Him and that moment we will ultimately see Him, could it be that we have diminished or devalued what we presently possess? The _____ is good news for the believer right now.

The “set apart” life is not simply living set apart from the _____ but also a set apart to the _____. It is not simply a drawing away from but a drawing toward. It is not merely denying some _____ but embracing Some _____!

Beloved, we are the redeemed. Not just from, but to.
